- Review of Mindfulness and "What" Skills
- Today’s Skill: "How" Mindfulness Skills
- Something to Try at Home
- Q&A

Week 4 of 16 Week Series
May 6th 2021
Your Toolbox:

- Thinking Dialectically
- Wise Mind
- Observe
- Describe
- Participate
- Nonjudgmentally
- One-Mindfully
- Effectively
Reminder: What is Mindfulness?

• Building awareness
• Being in the present moment
• Trying to withhold/stop judgements
• Focusing your mind where you want it to be

Being in control of your mind, rather than being controlled by thoughts and emotions
How does Mindfulness Help?

1. Gives you more choices and control over your behavior
2. Reduces your emotional suffering and increase your pleasure
3. Helps you make important decisions
4. Helps focus your attention to make you more effective and productive
5. Increases your compassion for yourself and others
6. Lessens your pain, tension, stress, and improves health
What are "What" Skills?

- Observe
- Describe
- Participate
Mindfulness
Let's Practice
What are "How" Skills?

HOW we do the WHAT kills

1. Nonjudgmentally
2. One-mindfully
3. Effectively

Unlike the "what" skills, you can use the "how" skills simultaneously!
#1: Nonjudgmental

The way we observe, describe or participate is by taking a nonjudgmental stance.

Do not judge things as:

- Good or Bad
- Valuable or Not Valuable
- Worthwhile or Worthless
- How things "should" be or "should not" be

There are two types of judging:

Discriminating & Evaluating
Discriminating/Differentiating

A judgement that discriminates will determine whether or not two or more things are the same or different, or if it meets a predetermined set of standards

- We need these judgements to survive
- Based on facts
- Goal is to decrease judgements about things being "better" or "worse" than one another, as this is not a factual discrimination

Examples:

- Judges decide if something is within the law or outside the law
- Teachers decide if a test answer is correct or incorrect
Evaluating

• Based on opinions, ideas, meaning and values
• Not based on facts and reality
• "Good or Bad" "Valuable or Not Valuable" "Right or Wrong"
• Each person's perception will be different

Example:
Describing fruit as "good" or "bad" instead of "ripe" or "rotten, brown, and full of bugs"

The Problem:
over time, people forget that they are using short-hand to evaluate, and begin to take these evaluations more as facts. Over time, our evaluations have a deep impact on our emotions and the way we engage with the world
"My friend is a Jerk!"

Saying someone is a "jerk" is an evaluating judgement...

It doesn't tell us what that person did, what their behaviors are and how that is impacting others...
Discriminating

Eating a banana that is rotten could make you sick. This is a fact.

Evaluating

People have an opinion on when they like to eat a banana. This range is based on the individual.

Let's Practice Non-Judgmental Labeling

1) Pick an object around your home
2) Practice describing this object to another person – paying close attention to using words that imply values as 'good' or 'bad'
Step by Step

We start by practicing being non-judgmental when we describe things

1. We notice our judgements, don't judge yourself for judging!
2. You can start counting your judgements
3. Restate your judgements in a factual way

Our Goal:
Get rid of "good" and "bad" and replace them with the facts!
#2: One-mindfully

- Doing only one thing at a time
- With awareness and alertness
- Immediate present, not past or future

Doing more than one thing at a time can be dangerous!

What are some examples?
Sets of Behaviors

Engaging in a set of behaviors that function together is different than attempting to multi-task!

Examples of Behaviors that function together:

• Listening to a teacher or manager while taking notes on a meeting
• Talking to a friend while you walk down a hallway

An example of behaviors that don't function together: Why is this different?

• Have you ever been texting while listening to someone talk, and then you accidentally wrote out what you were hearing and not what you were thinking?
Multi-tasking

- You have two options:
  - Do one thing at a time
  - Try to multitask

- Experiments show that people who focus on completing things one at a time have greater levels of accuracy and complete the tasks faster! (Rubinstein et al., 2001)

How many of you have tried doing your homework while watching TV?
What does the research say?

Multitasking: A Human Delusion?

"People can't multitask very well, and when people say they can, they're deluding themselves," said neuroscientist Earl Miller. And, he said, "The brain is very good at deluding itself."

Miller, a Picower professor of neuroscience at MIT, says that for the most part, we simply can't focus on more than one thing at a time.

What we can do, he said, is shift our focus from one thing to the next with astonishing speed.

"Switching from task to task, you think you're actually paying attention to everything around you at the same time. But you're actually not," Miller said.

"You're not paying attention to one or two things simultaneously, but switching between them very rapidly."
#3: Effectively

- Doing what works
- Being skillful and not just "giving in"
- Do what we need to do to reach our goals
  - Once we recognize our objectives, we can determine the most effective route to obtaining them

Example: Say your family is planning a vacation. Some people want to go someplace warm. Some people want to go skiing (someplace cold). What is your objective? Family time OR destination?
Being Right vs. Being Effective

Sometimes we must let go of "being right" or proving our point... in order to be effective towards our goals.
Emotions vs. Being Effective

Sometimes emotions can get in the way of our goals. We might think fear means we don't want something, or we make choices out of anger.
At Home Practice:

• Choose an activity that you do multiple times a week. It could be attending class, attending a work meeting, having a meal with friends or family
• Participate in that activity how you regularly would
• Afterwards, think about how you participated in that activity and rate it on a scale from 1 to 10, with 1 being "not at all present" and 10 being "totally present"
At Home Practice:

• If you weren't a 10, what would be different if you were a 10? What would that look like? Imagine what it would feel like to be fully present.

• Next time you do that activity, try to participate effectively so you're at a 10. Remember: that's about being present and working towards your long term goals, those goals could be graduating, getting promoted, connecting with others, it's about doing what works for YOU.
Another helpful skill is to start tracking your moods and the skills you use throughout the week. This will give you a better idea of what your go to skills are and help remind you to practice other skills!

There are also lots of helpful apps!

Or create a notes page on your phone or in a journal!
